JpGU Meeting 2013 Exhibition

Japan Geoscience Union

Introduction

The Japan Geoscience Union will hold its twenty fourth annual meeting in spring, 2013. This meeting, which has been held every year since 1990, brings together researchers in differing specialties from many institutions throughout the world and continues to evolve as a forum for exchanging ideas and presenting new research results. In 2012 there were more than 7,300 participants, making this the third largest meeting of its kind after the meetings of the AGU and EGU.

This annual meeting of the Japanese Earth, Planetary and Space Sciences community aims to cover not only research related material but also any information and trends of interest to the Earth, Planetary and Space Sciences community. This meeting also provides an excellent forum for companies working in these areas to make contact with a global audience, and we welcome their participation.

The meeting provides a forum for the exchange of information about Earth, Planetary and Space Sciences research projects and for companies to introduce new Earth, Planetary and Space Sciences related equipment. It also provides an opportunity for both exchange of personnel and hiring of new staff.

We welcome participation from all members of the global Earth, Planetary and Space Sciences community in 2013.

Outline

Name : Japan Geoscience Union Meeting 2013 Exhibition

Term: May 19th SUN~24th FRI, 2013

Venue : Makuhari Messe, International Conference Hall 1st and 2nd floors

Organized by Japan Geoscience Union

Booths provided in 2013: 103 (104 in 2012)
